Francis Crowley to Die Thursday Night For Killing Officer

SCORNS SWEETHEART

More Than 2,000 Ask for Permission to Witness Execution

OCCINING, N. W.—(P)—Francis (Two Gun) Crowley, who lived all his twenty years in New York and can scarcely write his name, cut out the last of his paper toys Thursday and stole glances at the picture of an electric chair posted on his cell wall.

He is to die in the electric chair in Sing Sing Thursday night for murdering a policeman, Frederick Hirsch, who approached an automobile in which Crowley was parked with the sweetheart Helen Walsh.

"I didn't want to forget it the youth said in explaining why he pasted the picture of the chair in his cell.

Crowley was arrested with Rudolph Durringer after a two hour siege by hundreds of policemen of an apartment house in New York City.

He joshed Durringer as the latter went to the electric chair for the murder of a dance hall girl.

More than two thousand persons have asked permission to see him electrocuted Thursday night.

SCORNS SWEETHEART

CORNING, N. W.—(P)—From Sing Sing death house, Francis (Two Gun) Crowley, 21, due to die Thursday night for the murder of a policeman, sent words of scorn Wednesday to his sweetheart, Helen Walsh, 17.

"To hell with Helen Walsh; she wants to sell her story to the papers," the slayer told. "I don't care if she does. I'll tell her to go to hell."

When informed the girl had applied to the Brooklyn Supreme Court for an order to permit her to visit him, Crowley said he killed Patrolman Frederick Hirsch of Nassau county eight months ago because, he said, he "hated cops."

Relapse Suffered By Mrs. Cantrell

Resumes Hiccoughing at Hospital After Two-Day Respite

STUTTGART—Mrs. Ethel Cantrell, aged 31, of Humphrey whose strange case has baffled physicians and has attracted nationwide attention, was hiccoughing again Wednesday night and complications have set in, it was said at the Drennon hospital where she was taken after suffering 23 days from the strange malady. The relapse came after it was announced that she was on the road to recovery.

Mrs. Cantrell began hiccoughing December 23, and was confined to her home at Humphrey. She was brought to Stuttgart Sunday afternoon and placed in the Drennon hospital where she spent two restful days and nights.

Physicians announced Wednesday night that Mrs. Cantrell's condition was worse, and that they would make a statement for newspapers Thursday. Though hundreds of inquiries from news agencies and interested people from various parts of the country have been received here since Mrs. Cantrell became a patient at the hospital, physicians still refuse to divulge the kind of treatment being given.

Food Rushed to Flood Refugees

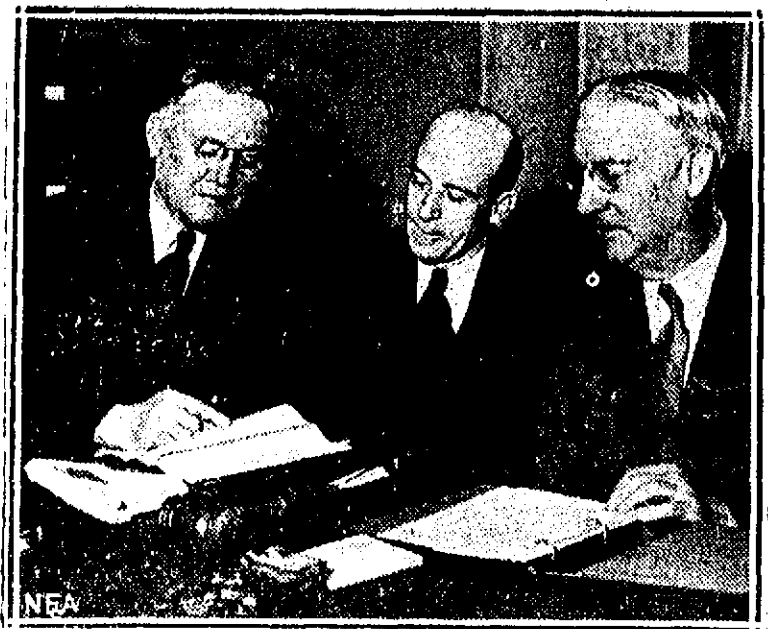

Red Cross Sends Boatloads of Provisions to Isolated Town

GLENDORA, Miss.—(P)—National Red Cross relief workers in charge of the Mississippi's delta 200-mile-wide flood zone Wednesday night concentrated their efforts toward relief of an acute situation at Crowder, town of 450 in Quitman county.

Crowder was faced by threatened food shortage after more than 1,000 homeless from the flooded Quitman-Panola basin had crowded into the town. Three boatloads of provisions were started across the delta's inland lake.

The pressure of the six week's floods appeared somewhat relieved in Quitman and Panola counties, but Leflore, Humphreys and Yazoo counties faced new battles to hold crumbling levees intact. Greenwood pressed convicts and citizens into service on the Yazoo river dikes to keep its business district from inundation. Portions of this city's residential section are already under water but strengthened levees promised to hold.

Two Killed as Japs and Chinese Battle

Japan Pushes Ahead in Operations Against "Bandits"

(By Associated Press)

Antipathy between Japanese and Chinese in Shanghai culminated in a battle Wednesday in which two persons were killed and many were injured.

Investigations of the clash were started by the authorities of the foreign settlement and the Japanese consulate. From the large Japanese colony of the city came threatening rumblings.

Five Americans and five Canadian airmen, lured to China by stories of a $1000 a month jobs piloting military airplanes, were stranded without money in Shanghai. Chinese authorities said they weren't hiring any fighting help.

In Manchuria, Japan pushed ahead with a series of operations against "bandits."

Meanwhile, Tokyo prepared for the dissolution of the diet at Thursday's opening session. A call for a general election was expected, made necessary by the fact that Premier Inagaki, in power only about a month, has a minority backing in the parliament.

League of Nations officials, commenting on reports that China intended to invoke against Japan the league covenant provisions for economic boycott and military action, said technicalities would prevent any such action.

Rail Executives Delay Deliberations on Wages

CHICAGO.—(P)—The sixth session of the negotiations between railway presidents and their organized employees was postponed Wednesday morning to enable the executives to collect more data in support of their plan for a 10 per cent wage reduction.

The union leaders Tuesday told the railroad presidents that if they wanted the employees to give "careful consideration" to financial arguments for the wage reduction, it would be advisable for them to present "a written compilation of what they regarded as important statistics."

The presidents said they would have them compiled and Tuesday's meeting broke up early to enable them to start on the work. Wednesday morning, their information was still incomplete and at the president's request the conference was deferred.

Texas Democrat Again Appears Before House With Proposal

WASHINGTON.—(P)—Full cash payment of the soldiers' bonus certificates through issuance of new money was urged in the house Wednesday by Representative Patman, democrat, of Texas.

"This debt should be paid in treasury notes which would circulate as money," he said. "This would cause a moderate inflation of $2,200,000,000 in the currency which is much needed at this time."

New Oil Depot at Third and Elm Sts.

John Barlow Buys Hatch Property for New Station

The construction of a large modern service station on the F. Hatch property at Third and Elm streets, which he recently purchased from the Hatch heirs was announced Thursday by John D. Barlow.

A blacksmith shop and other old structures are being razed to make way for the new construction.

Mr. Barlow said he was building the new station for lease to a national oil company, but was not ready to announce the name.

The real estate involved is the site of one of the original industries of pioneer Hope—the wagon factory of the late F. Hatch, which operated a generation ago.

The new service station will be one of the first new construction projects since Third street was declared the cross-town route of highway No. 67, the Broadway of America, Mr. Barlow said.

Couple Dives Into River to End Lives

Elderly Pair Drive Car Off Wharf, Die in Each Other's Arms

SOUTH FREEPORT, Me.—John Ineson, 70, walked into the South Freeport postoffice at noon Wednesday, purchasing two stamps, affixed them to letters, re-entered his automobile in which his wife, Henrietta, 63, was waiting, drove off down the hill toward the South Freeport boat landing, and steered his car into the Har-raseeket river.

Employees at a boat shop heard the splash and saw the hats of the couple floating on the water.

The automobile was raised from the water which covered it to a depth of about four feet and the bodies of the couple removed. The elderly pair was found clasped in each other's arms.

One of the letters which Ineson had mailed was addressed to their daughter, Mrs. Frederica Smith of Stephentown, Texas, and the other to Mr. Ineson's brother, W. F. Ineson of Suncook, N. H. The letter addressed to the daughter, read:

"Daughter: Mother and I are gone. Don't come. Your uncle will take care of things."

The letter to Mr. Ineson's brother gave the impression that the couple were discouraged with life.

Ineson and his wife have been residents of this village for more than 50 years. The wharf from which the couple took the fatal plunge is located at the end of the street on which they had lived all their married life.

Acreage Reduction Laws Ineffective for Southern States

Limit Expires in Mississippi Making Arkansas Measure Imperative

BILLS ARE DOOMED

Texas and South Carolina Only States to Enact Definite Legislation

LITTLE ROCK.—When the time limit on Mississippi's cotton acreage reduction law expired Wednesday, as a result of the failure of other cotton producing states to adopt a similar law, it became practically certain that the Arkansas acreage control law has become ineffective.

Both states passed acts similar to the Texas plan, which limited cotton acreage in 1932 to 30 per cent of all cultivated crops in 1931. It was estimated that this would reduce the cotton acreage approximately 50 per cent.

The Arkansas law, passed at a special session last October, was worded so that it would not become effective until similar laws had been passed by states producing 75 per cent of American grown cotton in 1931. The governor was to issue a proclamation of notification when action of other states had made the Arkansas law effective, but repeal of the Mississippi law and failure of several other cotton growing states to enact such legislation ends the probability of the reduction plan becoming general.

The Louisiana no-cotton act will not become effective unless states growing 75 per cent of the cotton enact similar laws. The Texas law is not dependent upon action of other states for its effectiveness. It was passed without any conditions and will be in effect this year unless held invalid by the courts.

South Carolina is the only other state that passed an act similar to the Texas law. It will not become effective unless states growing 75 per cent of the cotton enact similar laws.

Mississippi Law Inoperative

JACKSON, Miss.—(P)—Mississippi's cotton acreage reduction law, enacted at a special session last fall, automatically expired Wednesday.

The "Texas cotton plan" act collapsed under its own expiration provisions which called for automatic repeal if a majority of cotton growing states failed to pass similar legislation by January 20, 1932.

Only Texas, Arkansas and South Carolina have passed similar legislation.

The law would have limited cotton acreage in 1932 to 30 per cent of the total cultivated acreage of 1931 or 50 per cent of the 1931 cotton acreage.

"I see no reason to hope for cotton acreage reduction next year," Senator W. B. Roberts of Rosebud, long time advocate of cotton acreage reduction by law, and joint author of the Mississippi act, declared Wednesday. His advice to farmers for 1932, he said, is to raise everything necessary for a live-at-home program, "and all the cotton you can."

Law in Texas Attacked

FRANKLIN, Tex.—(P)—Constitutionality of the Texas cotton acreage reduction law was attacked in District Court here Wednesday.

Virtually all afternoon was occupied with arguments of attorneys on demurrers to injunction proceedings brought by the state against Fred L. Smith, Calvert farmer.

County Attorney T. L. Tyson of Franklin sought the injunction on grounds that Smith planned to plant more than the 30 per cent of last year's acreage allowed by the law.

Basis of the attack on the law was contained in several demurrers to the petition for injunction, which set forth that Smith had shown in a crop mortgage that he planned to plant 100 acres out of 1,350, or about 85 per cent, to cotton.

One demurrer asserted the defendant had made contracts with lumber and obligations which would be impaired by enforcement of the law. It declared federal and state constitutions forbade enactment of any law which impaired the obligations of contract.

Another demurrer said the law amounted, in effect, to taking property of the defendant. Other demurrers said the law violated provisions of the federal constitution which granted equal protection of the law to all citizens, that it was discriminatory and was a price fixing, rather than a conservation measure.

Floyd Is Believed Hiding in Ozarks

County Officers Gather at Muskogee to Hunt for Bandit

MUSKOGEE, Okla.—(P)—Informed that Charles (Pretty Boy) Floyd, outlaw, wanted in Oklahoma and other states for murder and bank robbery was in a veritable fortress hidden in foothills of the Ozarks near the Arkansas state line, county officers of Eastern Oklahoma were concentrating in Muskogee Wednesday.

A man hunt was to be started soon although it was learned the officers knew little of the hill hideout except its general location.

Floyd, for whose capture rewards totaling $4000 have been offered in Ohio and Oklahoma, was raised near Sallisaw, east of here in Sequoyah county. Members of his family still reside there. His father was shot to death more than two years ago near Sallisaw.

A hunt for Floyd was organized recently after the robbery of two banks in Oklahoma county on the same day.

A Southwest Arkansas district meeting of the American Legion and the general public is scheduled for 8 o'clock Thursday night in Hope city hall, when O. L. Bodenhamer, past national commander, will speak.

Texarkana Delegation

From Texarkana will come a large delegation of Legion folk, headed by Past State Commander J. L. Kosminsky, who is also to appear on the program. It is expected that Adjutant Sisson, of Little Rock, and State Commander Armstrong of Fort Smith, will also attend, although this had not been confirmed up to Thursday noon.

The Hope Boys Band will play during the meeting. The address of welcome is to be delivered by E. F. McFadden, with a short address by B. R. Hamm, district commander of the Legion.

Major Bodenhamer is to be introduced by Alex. H. Washburn.

Stringer to Preside

Other details of the program are complete, for what is expected to be the largest and best Legion rally in many months' according to J. L. Stringer, commander of the Hope post, who will act as master of ceremonies Thursday night.

Mrs. Bodenhamer, who had originally expected to attend a meeting of the Legion Auxiliary here the same night, has been forced to cancel her plans according to Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Hamm, who will be Major Bodenhamer's host Thursday night.

Slew His Wife in Dispute Over Baby

Geo. Reynolds Confesses to Killing, Hot Springs Officers Say

HOT SPRINGS.—Within an hour after the body of a woman found murdered in woods about two miles from Hot Springs Wednesday had been identified as Mrs. Irene Reynolds, wife of Guy Reynolds, the husband was under arrest suspected of the crime. He admitted having killed his wife, giving minute details of a quarrel which he said led to the tragedy, officers said.

The body of Mrs. Reynolds was identified by her mother, Mrs. Melliss Avant of Hot Springs.

Police Capt. Arch Cooper and Constable John Young, assigned to the case, left immediately for the Reynolds home, six miles northwest of Bismark, in search of the victim's husband.

A relative of Reynolds told the officers that Reynolds had not been there, but Captain Cooper, who was acquainted with Reynolds, decided to search the premises, and the officers soon found Reynolds hiding in a corn crib.

"Come out, Guy, and keep your hands up," ordered Captain Cooper. "I have known you a long time and I hate to have to arrest you."

"Yes," replied Reynolds, stepping out of the corn crib, "and I hated to do what I did."

Reynolds was unarmed.

When the officers arrived at the city jail with Reynolds, he confessed to Prosecuting Attorney Emory and Chief of Police Joe Wakelin.

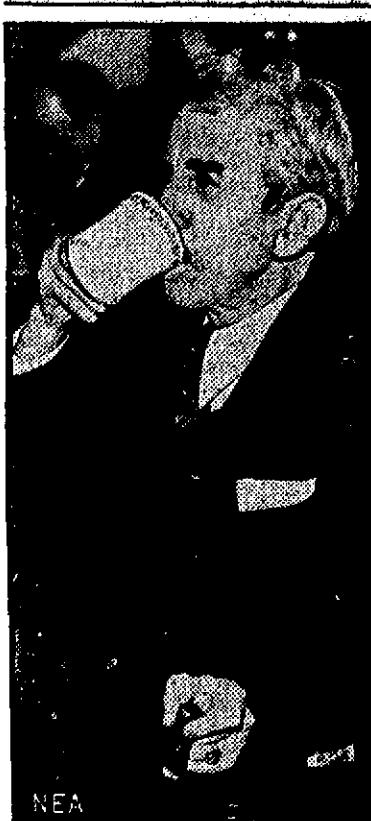

Reynolds' 23-month-old baby was found at the Reynolds home. Officers were aided in their search for Reynolds by George Brenner, proprietor of the Gross mortuary, where the body of the wife lies. Brenner said that he gave Reynolds a "lift" Sunday and that the man was carrying a baby.

Reynolds told officers that he had been making his home with Mrs. Lonnie D. Sutton in Hot Spring county. Sutton is in the county jail charged with burglary and grand larceny, and also is wanted by Hot Spring county officers to face charges of stealing cattle.

Reynolds said he came to Hot Springs Sunday morning and called at the home of his mother-in-law and talked to his wife. He persuaded her to go with him, he said. Soon after they had left the house they started quarreling over the baby. Reynolds

Attorney General In Collection Ruling

Declares That Stone County Collector's Office Is Vacant

LITTLE ROCK.—(P)—The office of the Stone county collector has been declared vacant by the Attorney General, thus raising the question whether the State Treasurer should collect taxes due January 10.

A test suit is to be filed immediately to determine the question and also whether the state treasurer should collect taxes in any county where a collector failed to make bond by the first Monday in January, which under Thursday's opinion would make the office vacant.

Beverly Named to Porto Rico Post

Supreme Court Vacancy, However, May Not Be Filled Immediately

WASHINGTON.—(P)—Pres. Hoover Wednesday named the attorney general of Porto Rico, James R. Beverly, 37, to be governor general of the island.

Comparatively young for so important a post, Beverly will succeed Theodore Roosevelt, who will sail shortly to be governor general of the Philippines.

The president Wednesday night found his appointment problem far from solved. He is finding some difficulty in the selection of a man for the Supreme Court seat suddenly left vacant a week ago by Oliver Wendell Holmes. White House officials said Wednesday appointment for this high post was not in immediate prospect. Seven new names for the court were placed before the chief executive for his consideration.

The present home of the new drug store has been remodeled, and is remarkably located for convenience in curb service. The people of Prescott seem to be appreciative of this new institution and hail the return of Mr. Shell to his home town.

Trunk Slayer Will Fight Earnestly For Her Life Thursday

Prosecution Alienist Bitterly Denounced by Defendant

TESTIMONY STARTS

Several Women Faint as Crowds Gather in the Court Room

PHOENIX, Ariz.—(P)—Winnie Ruth Judd leaped her chair during the murder trial Thursday for doctor Joseph Catton, San Francisco prosecution alienist.

"You get out of here she cried, crying with tensed muscles, and flinging her eyes at the tall psychiatrist approached her chair during a brief court recess."

Several women fainted in the crowd which stormed the court room attempting to get seats for the first days testimony in the trial of Mrs. Judd for killing her two girl-friends.

A jury panel of 29 and an alternate panel of four was seated according to Arizona law before Judge Howard C. Speakman's Maricopa county superior court adjourned Wednesday. One night, opposing counsel were to decide upon the names to be sworn in peremptory challenges, to this select the trial jury of 12 men immediately after court convenes Thursday.

One alternate will be seated. The prosecution may exercise 10 peremptory challenges and the state seven. The broad hint, placed on court records by Herman Lewkowitz, associated in the defense with Paul Schenck of defense plans, to endeavor to establish "reasonable doubt of the commission" of Mrs. Judd with the slaying, and "the possibility the crime was committed by another party," looked back to the early days of the murder investigation.

The state at one time bent its investigation on the theory that Mrs. Judd was not physically able, without aid, to commit the slayings and ship the bodies to Los Angeles in trunks. Later the prosecution abandoned that task. Shortly before the trial, the state was reported to have pressed again its investigation of possible accomplices, but the offices of County Attorney Lloyd J. Andrews declined to confirm it.

Another name was placed in the record by Lewkowitz in examination of Henry J. Allen, contractor, who said he did not know Halloran.

"Have you ever done business with the firm of Morsen, Dunnehan and Ryan?" demanded the defense attorney, naming a wholesale hardware and building supply company of Phoenix and El Paso, Texas.

Allen said he had not.

"Are you acquainted with Mr. Ryan of that firm?" Loykowitz continued.

"No," answered Allen, "I am not."

The name of Fred Ryan had been brought into the case shortly after the investigation started, as a friend of Halloran and of the three women.

Uses Shotgun to Commit Suicide

Jack Reed, War Veteran, Had Brooded Over Ill Health

MORRILTON.—Jack Reed, aged 34, World war veteran, ended his life with a shotgun about 100 yards from his home at Cleveland, 25 miles north of Morrilton, Tuesday night. Justice Sherman Brenns held an inquest and returned a verdict of suicide.

Reed picked up the shotgun and left home after telling his wife and three small children goodbye. He placed the butt of the gun on the top of a wood pile at the rear of J. H. Frazier's store and, after placing the barrel against his head, pulled the trigger.

Dependancy over ill health was given as the cause. Reed was drawing compensation from the government for physical disabilities, and recently appeared to be brooding over the prospect of entering a veterans' hospital. He came to Morrilton early Tuesday and arranged all of his business affairs.

Topsy-Turvy Society

"I DON'T want to go back home. It's no fun having everything you want and having it handed to you just for the asking. I want to work and do interesting things."

That was what a girl of 15 said the other day when police found her in a working girls' rooming house in Buffalo. She had run away from her home in a mid-western city more than a month before—her parents are well-to-do—and had been working as a salesgirl in a five-and-ten-cent store.

The whole story, while it is appealing, proves nothing much, except that our world is a trifle topsy-turvy. The present is a time when there are a good many millions of men who cannot get work of any kind, and who would welcome nothing so much as having everything they wanted for a little while. And yet this variation of the perennial story of the "poor little rich girl" pops up, in the midst of depression and unemployment, to remind us that things are woefully uneven and unfair.

And it is, perhaps, one of the sharpest indictments against a system that permits idle wealth and desperate poverty to exist side by side.

If the people who have, in abundance, knew precisely where they are going, and were able to use their leisure so as to get the utmost out of it in human values, it might be possible to look on unemployment and poverty as necessary evils. If our social system flowered at the top in a spacious and invigorating life of ideals and accomplishment, as the social system of England did a century ago, we could forgive it the misery at the bottom.

But it doesn't. The youngster—incidentally, she sounds like a thoroughly likable and admirable girl—found it more fun to live in a cheap rooming house and plug away as a salesgirl than to live at home. The society world offered her nothing she could put her teeth in. Even at 15, she was wise enough to see it.

Her experience is an ironic commentary on the working of our whole social framework.

Admitting Foreign Mates

THE bill now pending before Congress which would admit to this country the foreign-born husbands or wives of naturalized American women and men is a measure that ought to be passed as a matter of course.

In general, the sentiment of the country is undoubtedly squarely in favor of strict immigration restrictions. We discovered, some years ago, that the melting pot wasn't functioning perfectly, and cutting down on immigration was nothing more than ordinary common sense.

But the law must be humane and reasonable. To admit to this country the mates of immigrants who have become citizens would not appreciably swell the total of incoming foreigners. And it would relieve a good deal of distress and avert a lot of unnecessary suffering and unhappiness.

Flying For Fun

THE student flyer in Kentucky who went up in a plane on a practice flight and decided to keep on and make an impromptu cross-country flight, just because the tingle of the crisp, cool air and the sheer pleasure of flying were too much for him, seems to us to have an extremely good understanding of the potentialities of aviation.

Airplanes conquer space, link distant cities more closely together, and provide admirable weapons for war, as we have often been told; but the chief reason why mankind is interested in them is because they seem to bring closer to realization those old, gaudy dreams of aimlessly sailing through the air, free with a freedom that the earth-bound can never know. To fly just to be flying, and not because flying is the fastest method of transportation available—that is what most of us earthlings are really looking for; and this Kentucky youngster seems to have gratified this ancient impulse to the full.

Where the Money Goes

THE partial liquidation of two small banks in Jefferson county has cost the depositors $7,700 and no dividend has been paid yet, although a year has passed since the banks were closed.

We don't say there has been any waste in the liquidation of these banks but we do say it is a rotten system that permits the assets of a defunct bank to be gutted by liquidating expenses.

The combined deposits of both banks could not be much, and if another year is needed to liquidate the banks, the depositors will get what "Johnny shot at," and whatever assets the banks may have had will go to paying the salaries and other expenses of liquidation.

One receiver could handle the affairs of a dozen of these kind of banks.

But the "pie" must be made to go around as far as possible. In other words a dozen men's influence when the election rolls around is worth exactly twelve times as much as one man's influence.—Plus Bluff Commercial.

Furniture Factory To Resume Work

60 Day Run Guaranteed for Owners of Ft. Smith Establishment

FORT SMITH, Ark.—(AP)—Furniture factories here are assured of at least sixty days steady work as a result of orders secured at the American Furniture Mart's two-week show in Chicago.

Manufacturers returning from Chicago said they had obtained enough orders to guarantee a sixty-day run and that they expected supplementary orders would be sufficient to keep the plants in steady operation until late spring and early summer.

The furniture industry is Ft. Smith's largest single business. The industry is estimated to employ 1,500 persons, with probably a total of 7,500 persons depending upon the eight factories here.

Safety Rule

WASHINGTON.—The Aeronautics Branch of the U. S. Department of Commerce has issued a provision affecting the safety of retractable landing gears which have caused a few accidents since their appearance by standard. The rule provides that planes equipped with this gear must have an indicator to show the position of the wheels at all times.

Plans Canada Flight

VANCOUVER, B. C.—Eric Redgrave-Gunner, well-known British Columbia pilot, is planning the first non-stop flight from Vancouver to Montreal. He will attempt this flight early in the spring, and if successful hopes to attempt the first solo flight of the Atlantic since Lindbergh made his trip.

Subtle Hint

He: It costs a great deal more than one would think to become a broad-minded and intelligent man of the world.

Held As Slayer

Accused of murder, T. H. Harper, above, a shoe salesman, was jailed at Greensboro, S. C., after the fatal shooting of Charles O. Holton, tractor salesman, in Harper's home near High Point, N. C. The two men were alleged to have quarreled over Harper's wife.

In A Tough Spot

LONDON, Ont.—Edward C. Burton, Toronto air mail pilot, traveled nearly 300 miles across Western Ontario and back again, twice passing his destination, London, in a dense fog. Searching frantically for a landing field, and rapidly running out of gas, he was forced to take to his parachute, landing safely a mile away from his wrecked craft.

Towers of Silence
If men could still be holy anywhere, it would be in towers such as these. That line the coasts with lamps and warn the ships—
The holy towers of the silences.
Out there where voice and sinew matter least
And temptations can leave no deeper mark
Than sea gulls leave on waves, a man might learn
To be alone with safety in the dark.
And when a man is master of a light, that he can send out like a silver rod between a life and death, he ought to know Something of the joy of being God.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action: it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth. Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs. Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

THREE KINDS OF LOVE

BY KAY CLEAVER STRAHAN

© 1931, by Doubleday, Doran and Co.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

ANN and CECILY FENWICK have for years supported themselves, their younger sister, MARY-FRANCES, and their grandparents, known as "HOSALEE" and "GRAND." Because of this financial responsibility, Ann, who is 24, is unable to marry PHIL BOYD, young lawyer to whom she has been engaged for eight years. Cecily, 22, loves BARRY MCNEEL, an engineer, but when he proposes she refuses to name their wedding date for the same reason.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXVIII

BARRY came to meet her, but this morning he did not ask whether he looked pretty, and that was fortunate, because he looked frightful. He looked white, and unpressed, and unshaven, and tired, and cross. He did not take her hands. He hung his own at his sides, as if they were pounds too heavy to lift, and they pulled his shoulders down and forward.

He said, "I've been driving all night, trying to get away from you."

She said, "Grand is coming. He'll make a scene. Let's go—anywhere."

As she stepped into the car one of the mules dropped off. Barry stooped to pick it up, and she said, "Hurry."

WHAT made Grand so hopping mad was that he could not recall a single speech of Lear's. To have been a lover, nay, more than a mere lover, a student, a disciple of the immortal Bard's for a lifetime, and then in a crisis to have it all come to naught, was hard, very hard. True, the blow, blow, thou winter wind, was ready to hand; but in his opinion the Helgholm section, directly counter to his own philosophy, all but ruined the song. Nor had he been able, ever, to give his entire approval to Rosalind. So he had to be content with moaning, again, to Ann, "She struck me down. Our little Cecily turned and struck me down," and let it go at that.

Ann knew better; but since she had not seen anything except Cecily running out of doors in her bathrobe, all she could say was, "But, Grand dear, she didn't mean to."

and leaves him moaning on the horse-hair sofa in the parlor while she went to telephone for the neighborhood doctor. Grand had been positive that he could not live until Dr. Elm could come from across the river.

Mary-Frances, two big frightened eyes beside the telephone, whimpered as Ann hung up the receiver. "Ann, did Grand say she could never darken his door again? Did he, Ann?"

"Silly!" said Ann. "Of course not. Run on and see what you can do about breakfast. That's sister's baby. Everything will be all right."

Young Dr. Selberg and his bedside manner arrived together. After a dignified and deliberate examination he reluctantly gave out the news that, though Mr. Fenwick was suffering from shock, he seemed to have sustained no fractures, abrasions, contusions, or lacerations. It was so formidable a list that the negative did not help much. Rosalind continued rocking and weeping; and Mary-Frances, poking about the kitchen after eavesdropping at Grand's door, asked in a choked voice, when Ann came, "Will he die?" And, reassured, "Will Cissy ever dare come home again?"

"Of course, dear. Cissy didn't mean to hurt him. She's not to blame. She wouldn't have hurt him for the world—and he isn't hurt a lot. Except his feelings. She'll be home before long and tell him she didn't mean to, and that she's sorry, and everything will be all right. Don't worry any more about it. Your history examination is today, isn't it?"

"History . . ." said Mary-Frances vaguely. Not since yesterday afternoon had she considered any history other than that which she and Earl were going to make together. Ovarious . . .

For the first time that morning Ann thought, "Cissy shouldn't have." To Mary-Frances she said, "Honey, all families have little fuses sometimes, and the only thing to do is forget all about them. Cissy will come home and be sorry, and by this time tomorrow everything will be as it has always been. Run along, now, if you've eaten your breakfast, and look over your notebooks. Your history examination is a thousand times more important than this little affair."

"Would it be all right, then," asked Mary-Frances, "for me to go to Ermintrude's for dinner this evening and stay all night?"

"Surely, dear. That will be fine. And you and Ermintrude can study together for your English examination tomorrow."

Mrs. Hill would see to it that they studied, during examination week. If Cissy shouldn't come home tomorrow, and if there should be another scene—perhaps at dinner—Mary-Frances would know nothing about it.

Mary-Frances hesitated, hung around. "I guess I'll kiss you good-by, Ann angel."

"Sister's baby," said Ann, and hugged her. "Don't you worry any more now, will you, precious?"

"No," said Mary-Frances, and snuggled. "I love you, Ann. I love you and Cissy and Grand and Rosalind. I love you all, Ann."

"Of course," said Ann, trying to make it light and matter-of-fact at the same time. "Everybody loves everybody around here. Run along now, dear, and get to your studying."

MARY-FRANCES went as far as the door. "You'll remember that, won't you, Ann angel? If anything should happen, or anything, I mean, Ann, you'll love me, too?"

Ann repressed a sigh, refused to allow herself to shake her head. "Of course, Mary-Frances. But don't be silly. What could happen?"

"Like," said Mary-Frances, "well—like if I should flunk in my exams or anything."

"You aren't going to flunk."

"I mean—if I should." She came back to Ann. "I'll kiss you good-by again, I guess. Will you and Cissy love me if I flunk?"

"Dear, listen to me. You are talking very foolishly. You aren't going to fail in your examinations. But, if you should, that wouldn't make any difference in our love for you. We'd be sorry and very much disappointed, but we'd love you just the same. Nothing you could do would make any difference in our love for you. But you must try hard, so that we can be proud of you as well as love you. You will, won't you?"

"I expect," sighed Mary-Frances, "that you'll all be proud of me sometime. Oh, yes—I expect you'll be proud, all right, if that's what you want to be."

"That's the way to talk honey," Ann approved. But she returned to the dishpan with some small worries concerning Mary-Frances. Of late she was so odd. The little girl seemed like a nice little girl, and Mr. and Mrs. Hill were the sensible people—only, Mary-Frances had never used to be so odd. Perhaps, during the summer, she and Cecily could encourage some new friendships for Mary-Frances.

Rosalind tiptoed into the kitchen. "He has forgiven her," she said. "He has forgiven her fully and freely and from his heart. It was his desire that I should come and tell you."

"That's good," said Ann briskly; far too briskly.

"Ann," breathed Rosalind, as Mary-Frances might have breathed it, "isn't he wonderful?"

"Indeed he is," said Ann promptly.

Editor's Note: The foregoing narrative is rather lengthy for this column; it is held a few minutes of interest for us we are repeating it here.

ADVENTURES OF A BASHFUL BOY.—One of the witty correspondents of the New York "Spirit of the Times" gives the following humorous account of a certain bashful lover. His name was Dabphule—we used to call him Jack for short. Heaven help him if he should ever see this story. I know he doesn't take the "Spirit." Among his many misfortunes, for he was cock-eyed and knock-kneed, he inherited the inconvenient one of bashfulness; nevertheless he was fond of the ladies, although when in their presence he never opened his mouth if he could help it, and when he did he would use both hands to help him. In fact he was a young man of great action. Jack was one day, when he was just graduated at college, called upon to think that he was to be a member of the "Society of the Future." He was asked to give a speech on the subject of "Love with the sweetest, love the most hygienic girl in the square; tell her his love, that is the rule." He had heard a good deal of the "language of the eyes," and he accordingly tried that, but whenever he looked particularly hard at the window where Miss Emily was in the habit of sitting, some person on the other side of the street would inevitably bow to him, thinking that he was endeavoring to catch his eye. He has admitted expressive eyes ever since. At length Jack obtained an introduction through his sister, and with great courage he called several times; but she was obliged to leave the city for a while, and as each interview had increased his ardor, he finally decided upon going it alone. Long before the hour fixed upon by custom for an evening visit, he found himself arrayed in his best. Blue coat, metal buttons, black cashmere pants, (said pants being a little tighter than the rest) and a spotless vest. The journey of the day state as an item of information that the thermometer ranged from seventy to eighty degrees. As Jack was it was a hundred. Jack found his courage and his perspiration oozing down his face, and he almost determined to pull off and go home. He considered however that he would take a walk past the house and see how he fared. By the time he reached the mansion he firmly concluded not to go in; but on casting an eye toward the parlor window, and perceiving no sign of life there, he thought it probable that no one was at home and as he had proceeded so far he would proceed farther and leave his card. No sooner determined than done. In a reckless moment he pulled the bell. The darned thing need not make such a cussed noise. The door was opened as if by magic and a servant politely asked him to walk in. Miss Emily was all alone in the parlor and would be delighted to see him.

Oh Lord! Here was a fix! Going into a dark parlor with a pretty girl alone! It was too late to retreat. Miss Emily was sitting all alone. Being perfectly convinced that no choice was left him, into the dark room he walked, or rather sidled.

All was perfect chaos to his eyes for a moment; but only for a moment, and then from the deepest gloom came forth an angel voice, bidding him welcome and draw near. To obey the order was but the work of a moment. He never dreamed of the obstacle fate had thrown in his way. He knew full well the stream of love had many ripples; but full grown snags entered not into his calculations. Judge therefore his astonishment at being tripped up almost at the fair one's feet, by a flat stool with pleathoric legs which chance or careless servant had placed on his road to happiness—over he went, and as the tailor had not allowed for an extra tension of the muscles and sinews, he not only procured a tumble, but also a compound fracture of the black pants, a compound fracture of the black pants, said fracture extending all across that point which came in closest contact with the chair. Having picked himself up as carefully as circumstances would allow, and a smothered laugh of Miss Emily's not setting him forward any, he at last succeeded in reaching his chair and drawing his coat tails to prevent a disagreeable exposure, set himself down with as much grace as a bear would be expected to exhibit when requested to dance on nettles. The young lady, who was almost suffocated with laughter at the sad mishap of her bashful lover, felt truly sorry for him, and used all her powers of fascination to drive it from his mind, and evidently succeeded so far as to induce him to make a remark—And on this remark she split, for just at the moment she discovered that she had lost her handkerchief. "What has become of it?" She was sure she had it with her when she came in. "Haven't you got it under you, Mr. Dabphule?" she said. Jack said surely that couldn't be so; but poor Jack, in venturing an answer, he could not possibly get along with this remark, and he almost determined to drop the coat tail. In his anxiety to receive the missing "viper," he even ventured to incline his body so as to get a glance on the floor. As he did so the fracture opened, and behold there lay, as the lady supposed, her handkerchief. It was the work of an instant to seize the corner, and exclaim, "Here it is, Sir, you needn't trouble yourself, Raise a little, it's under you." Alas! the "tail" was told; no escape; nothing short of a special interposition of providence could save his shirt. But what should he do? SLEW HIS WIFE said his wife threw stones at him and killed him.

"So I just picked up a rock and hit her in the head and knocked her down," the statement said. "But she got up and went to fighting again. I had the baby in my arms at that time and she kept on, so I picked up another rock and hit her. I think I threw three rocks as well as I remember, before I picked up the rock and hit her again."
Reynolds said he then took a stone in both hands and struck his wife on the forehead as she lay on the ground. Reynolds said he left his wife because she was "hard to get along with."
"She was all the time fussing at me and one thing and another, and cussing me out, and if I had a job and made any money I couldn't keep any of it—she was awful bad to spend the money," Reynolds continued.
He said that his wife had threatened to poison him and "to use a razor on me."
Reynolds said he and his wife had lived on Lester avenue and on Arbor street, and that he had worked for Ed Williams, driving a truck, delivering groceries and feed.
Besides her mother Mrs. Reynolds is survived by two brothers, Earl and Harry Webb.

Hempstead Covered Considerable Ground Over A Century Ago

Original County Consisted of About Six Southwestern Arkansas Counties. Was Divided Into Townships by First Court

When the first Hempstead court was in session in June, 1819, the county of Hempstead embraced a large part of the territory that is now the counties of Nevada, Pike, Clark, Little River, Lafayette and Howard. The third day of this court was spent in determining the boundaries of the several townships that were to be formed out of the whole, which was then known as the township of Little Missouri.
Out of the township of Little Missouri, which the record cites as bounded by the county lines of that time, were formed the townships of Ozan, Sallie, Clay, Missouri, Little Missouri and Pecan.
The court record of the day's proceedings, June 23, 1819, follows.
Court met pursuant to adjournment, present as before.
The court taking into consideration the vast territorial extent of the present township of Little Missouri, being now bounded by the present county lines, it is ordered that the following townships be laid off and bounded as follows:
Township of Missouri
All that portion of the county of Hempstead, bounded as follows, shall form one township, and be known by the name of Missouri township. By way of the Little Missouri river at the mouth of Howard creek, thence down said river to its confluence with the Ouachita river, thence down said river to the 33rd degree of the northern latitude, thence west with said degree of latitude so as to intersect the road leading from the Post of the Ouachita, to the courthouse in the county of Hempstead. Thence with said road by Hickman's to Randleman's, thence on a direct line to the head of Howard creek, thence down the same to the point of beginning.
Township of Monroe
And all that part of the county of Hempstead bounded as follows shall form one township to be called and known by the name of Monroe township, beginning at the mouth of the Bois d'Arc creek and Red river, thence down said river to the 33rd degree of northern latitude, thence east with said latitude to the southwest corner of Missouri township, thence with said line to Randleman's, thence in a direct line to Langford's and said Bois d'Arc creek and thence down said creek to the beginning.
Ozan Township
All that portion of Hempstead county bounded as follows shall form one separate township, and shall be known by the name of Ozan township. Beginning at Langford's on Bois d'Arc creek, thence in a direct line to Bryant's store, thence north to the Little Missouri, thence down the same

Piles All Gone

Without Salves or Cutting
Itching, bleeding, protruding piles go quickly and don't come back, if you remove the cause. Bad blood circulation in the hemorrhoidal veins causes piles by making the affected parts weak, flabby, and almost dead. Salves and cutting fail because only an internal medicine can actually correct the cause of piles. Dr. J. S. Leonard discovered a real internal Pile remedy. After prescribing it for 1,000 patients with success in 960 cases, he named it HEM-ROID. Ward and Son says one bottle of HEM-ROID Tablets must end your Pile misery or money back.
